

Fall: Bed Rails Were Left Down.

Family members told the nurse they were done visiting the patient so the nurse could raise the bed rails and turn the bed alarm back on. An hour later they got a call from the hospital that the patient had fallen out of bed, presumably because the nurse neglected the bed rails and the bed alarm.

The Court of Appeals of Wisconsin nevertheless dismissed the family's lawsuit because their lawyer did not have an expert witness. Paullin v. Oconomowoc Memorial Hosp., 2007 WL 2728281 (Wis. App., September 20, 2007).
