Age Bias: Court Turns Down Nurse's Lawsuit.

nurse with fifteen years nursing ex-1 perience gave a diabetic patient the hour shift.

The patient was only supposed to rehours

The nurse quickly recognized she had to be discharged late that evening. made a mistake and called the nursing director called the medical director and orders were given to start treatment to counteract the nurse's medication error.

significant harm the medical director ex- nurse nor the charge nurse could get the week off due to anxiety and came in and pressed major concerns about the gravity pills from the hospital pharmacy. of the nurse's error and its implications for her ability to function as a nurse. The di- cial access to the system that dispensed cided that her leaving the previous day and rector of nursing agreed and started the narcotics on the unit. She overrode the fact not reporting for work that day amounted paperwork to have the nurse terminated.

One way to prove discrimination is to show that a individual younger treated more favorably without any justification for such differential treatment.

> COURT OF APPEALS OF OHIO November 2, 2012

The Court of Appeals of Ohio ruled the nurse did not have grounds for an agediscrimination lawsuit.

The nurse's lawsuit pointed to the fact that a graduate nurse newly hired at the facility who was much younger than she had done basically the same thing but was only reprimanded and not fired.

That is, the new graduate nurse had erroneously duplicated doses of medication under circumstances that posed a significant threat to the patient's safety.

nursing home did not discriminate by hold-parison in a discrimination lawsuit. ing a more experienced, albeit much older much more drastic discipline on the older rad v. April Enterprises, 2012 WL 5383023 (Ohio App., November 2, 2012).

Racial Bias: Court Turns Down Nurse's Lawsuit.

he nurse who was in charge on the same insulin dose twice during her twelve- concerned about a patient on the unit who pervisor that she had to float to the longwas still in a lot of pain.

ceive one such dose every twenty-four day-surgery patient recovering on the unit believe she was adequately trained. after an appendectomy and was supposed to take home pending being able to have a HR director sent her home for the day. prescription filled at an outpatient phar-Even though the patient suffered no macy the next day, but neither the graduate note from her physician that she needed a

> However, the charge nurse had spethat no order was on file for inpatient use and withdrew the Percocets the physician wanted the patient to take home.

> The graduate nurse had to enter her code as a witness for the override to occur.

> The hospital did not allow nurses to dispense take-home meds. The Hispanic charge nurse was fired. The non-minority graduate nurse was only reprimanded.

One way to prove discrimination is to show that a non -minority individual treated more favorably without any justification for such differential treatment.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT NEVADA November 8, 2012

to a patient during one work shift, also of Nevada ruled that the two nurses, who from her physician as soon as practicable were treated very differently for the very which said how long she needed to be out same violation of hospital policy, were not and provided the medical justification. However, according to the Court, the in a similar situation for purposes of com-

The minority charge nurse was in a ployer was not honoring. nurse to a higher standard than an inexperi- supervisory position and used her authority enced graduate nurse and by imposing to order the non-minority graduate nurse to was no longer eligible for leave because take part. The minority nurse had no right she had quit her job by going out on medinurse for basically the same mistake. Bo- to sue for discrimination. Mandoki v. Carson-Tahoe Reg. Med. Ctr., 2012 WL 5465829 (D. Nev., November 8, 2012).

Panic Attack: Nurse's Rights Were Violated.

nurse who worked in the facility's I hospital's surgical orthopedic unit was T rehab unit was told by a nursing suterm care unit, where she had never ori-The patient in question was actually a ented or worked and for which she did not

She had been having anxiety at work, and now this was too much. She went to The patient's physician gave a phone the HR director's office. She was crying home's director of nursing. The nursing order to the patient's nurse, a newly hired and shaking, apparently having a panic graduate, for six Percocets for the patient attack. Rather than call an ambulance the > First thing the next morning she got a delivered the note to human resources.

> Her nursing supervisor, however, deto abandonment of her nursing responsibilities and terminated her from her job and reported her to the state board of nursing.

An employer cannot defeat employee's right to medical leave guaranteed by the US Family and Medical Leave Act by considering the employee to have quit, if the employee is not present being on leave to which he or she is entitled.

UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS EIGHTH CIRCUIT November 13, 2012

The US Court of Appeals for the ■ Eighth Circuit (Minnesota) ruled the nurse The US District Court for the District did give proper notice by bringing in a note

She had rights under the US Family and Medical Leave Act which her em-

It was not a valid argument that she cal leave to which she was entitled. Clinkscale v. St. Therese, __ F. 3d _ , 2012 WL 5476190 (8th Cir., November 13, 2012).

Legal Eagle Eye Newsletter for the Nursing Profession

December 2012